Sharing Your AI-Native Story

Why communicating what you've learned matters

- You've explored the EDGE world and understand what's changing
- You've experienced AI-Native work
- Now you can share your perspective on why it matters.
- This isn't about tools or hype—it's about impact
- To apply what you've learned, it helps to clearly explain your ideas to your team, manager, or other colleagues.

Elements of a Clear AI Story

Your simple three-part structure

- Part 1: EDGE foundation

  Here's what's changed and why it matters

- Part 2: AI-Native response

  Here's an idea for how we could apply this

- Part 3: Clear next steps

  Here's an easy next step we could take.

Refining The Message for Your Audience

Peer-to-Peer

- Audience: Colleagues, teammates, other departments
- Goal: Let's try this together
- Tone: Collaborative and encouraging

Managers

- Audience: Your supervisor, team lead, department head
- Goal: To get your feedback on an idea
- Tone: Solution-focused

Leadership

- Audience: Senior leadership, budget decision makers
- Goal: To share an observation about a relevant trend
- Tone: Business-focused and confident

Setting the Scene: The EDGE Reality

Every story has a beginning—ours starts with what's changed.

Exponential: Things are speeding up beyond what we expected

- To peers: We're all feeling overwhelmed by the pace
- To manager: Our team needs new capabilities to keep up
- To leadership: Market velocity demands strategic response

Generative: AI can create, not just automate

- To peers: Imagine what we could accomplish together
- To manager: Think about what our team could produce
- To leadership: Consider the competitive advantage possibilities

Disruptive: Old ways of working aren't cutting it anymore

- To peers: None of us can solve this alone
- To manager: Our team needs new approaches to stay competitive
- To leadership: Disruption requires organizational adaptation

Emergent: Surprises keep happening

- To peers: Let's be prepared for whatever comes next
- To manager: Our team should be ahead of the curve
- To leadership: We must position for unpredictable opportunities

The Turning Point: Taking An AI-Native Approach

- Transition to the solution: The AI-Native response
- AI-Native is the state of relentlessly embedding AI in new ways of thinking and working to navigate and lead in the age of AI

Peer-to-peer

We can work together to become AI-Native—embedding AI in how we think and collaborate.

Managers

Becoming more AI-Native could help our team build AI into our workflows to deliver better results faster.

Leadership

Our organization could become more AI-Native by embedding AI in operations, which could enhance our competitive advantage.

Clear Steps: What Happens Next

The Call to Action: A Simple Next Step

Make it Concrete and Actionable

Peer-to-peer

- Ask: Who wants to try this workflow redesign with me?
- Timeline: Let's pilot for 30 days and compare results.
- Success: We'll track time saved and quality improvements.

Managers

- Ask: Can I experiment with an AI tool and share what I learn?
- Timeline: For the next two weeks (or one reporting cycle)
- Success: Time saved on my task and a list of 2-3 key learnings to share.

Leadership

- Ask: Would a short summary of takeaways from my recent AI training help our team?
- Timeline: I can send a one-page summary by Friday.
- Success: One or two of the takeaways are adopted.

Crafting and Sharing Your AI-Native Story

15 min

Prompt in companion app

Use AI to Craft Your Story

- Step 1: Take 5-7 minutes to generate the first draft of your personal story using the provided AI prompt.
  - The goal isn't a perfect final product, but a solid starting point.
  - Your AI Prompt:

    "Help me outline a one-minute story for [my colleague/my manager] about what I learned in my AI foundations class. Structure it with 1) The most relevant EDGE force for my work and why. 2) What being 'AI-Native' could mean for us in a practical sense. 3) A small, simple next step I could take in the next two weeks to explore this."
- Step 2: Personalize the AI's output. Add your own voice, context, and specific work examples to make the story truly yours. Don't forget Responsible AI practices.

Insights and Action

1 min

Reflect

Think about one specific person you work with (a peer, your manager, or a leader). What is the most important thing you learned this week that would be valuable for them to know?

Apply

Ask AI: "Help me craft a one-minute story for [the person you just thought of]. I want to share the value of [the key takeaway you identified]. Structure the story using the EDGE, AI-Native, and Next Steps framework we learned."

Lesson Review

You can:

- Craft a concise summary of your AI-Native Story, linking it to a relevant challenge or goal in your work.

Congratulations!

What you've accomplished:

- Over the past two days, you've done more than learn about AI—you've practiced how to use it with purpose
- You started by understanding the EDGE imperative
- You built fluency in core AI building blocks
- You moved from tools to application with safe, strategic approaches
- You explored what it means to work AI-Natively
- You turned insight outward to influence real change
- … and you built an AI Agent!

Take-home Expectations

- When you leave this room, your job is not to explain what you learned—it's to show it
- Act on your phased roadmap and implement it over the next 30, 60, or 90-days
- Lead with consistency, visibility, and purpose
